Latest online content – new blogs

- There's a new blog from Alan Newman up on the site now about innovation in the insurance industry
- See <http://www.protectionreview.co.uk/pages/blogs> to read the blogs

Blog quote of the month: "The insurance sector attaches too much value to the past and too little value to the future. In circumstances that call for change, imagination and courage are more valuable than experience and compliance. There are a lot of bright, very analytical people in the insurance sector. Indeed, these are valuable characteristics if you want to get on. But most people who have this profile suffer from premature evaluation - so corporate immune systems kill off innovation too early.
